Introduction to World Music
This survey course introduces learners to music from across the globe as a way of understanding diverse cultures and their expressive traditions. Learners explore selected examples of indigenous and folk music, and the confluence of these musics with other classical and popular genres in historical and contemporary contexts. Learners will examine foundational concepts in the field of ethnomusicology, essential musical elements that enhance listening skills, and examples of the socio-cultural environments in which music is created and performed.
Level: UG
Attributes: ASTR (https://calendar.kpu.ca/courses-az/#astrtext), ARTS (https://calendar.kpu.ca/courses-az/#courseattributestext)

MUSI 1115 3 credits
Classical Music in Western Culture
Students will cultivate an understanding of classical music in western culture by listening to and studying musical works representing different styles, genres, geographical regions, and time periods. Students will also gain an understanding of the social, political, economic, and artistic context in which this music emerged. They will also develop basic aural skills in hearing rhythm, melody, harmony, colour, texture, form, and orchestration. To further enhance their aural skills, students will attend specified concerts (with costs incurred) and will actively listen to and analyse the performances. Note: Not for credit towards the Bachelor of Music in Musical Arts degree.
Level: UG

MUSI 1120 3 credits
Music Rudiments
Students will study the basic written aspects of musical language, acquiring the knowledge of all common clefs, intervals, common scales, basic chord structures and progressions, cadences, transposition, rhythm and fundamental musical terms. Students may earn credit for only one of MUSI 1100, MUSI 1120, and MUSI 1200 as they are equivalent courses. Note: This course is open to non-music majors.
Level: UG

MUSI 1130 3 credits
Music Technology I
This course provides an introduction to music technology and desktop recording. Key topics include digital audio workstations, music notation software, music composition and sound design. Students will present an online portfolio of their work in the final weeks of the course. Note: Students may earn credit for only one of MUSI 1102 and MUSI 1130 as they are equivalent courses.
Level: UG

MUSI 1133 2 credits
Fretboard Studies I
Students will begin to develop a full knowledge of the harmonic and melodic capabilities of the guitar fretboard. They will study fretboard harmony (using four-note chord voicings), scales, and arpeggios, and will cultivate music reading skills in lower and intermediate positions. Note: For students whose first instrument is guitar. This course is offered every second year.

History of Music IV: Challenging the Conventions of Music
This music history survey course engages students in an intensive study of contemporary musical developments from 1900 to the present. Students will encounter a diversity of genres, compositional approaches, and aesthetic ideals that emerged during this timeframe, and will situate salient features of contemporary music through a comparative examination of “common-practice” characteristics established in the Baroque, Classical, and Romantic periods. While considering how social, cultural, and technological developments since 1900 fundamentally changed music’s sound and structure, students will be challenged to answer the question at the heart of the course: “What is music?” Students will continue to cultivate aural skills by critically listening to music and studying representative compositions, and will further develop skills in researching, writing, and thinking about music.
