

ARTS

The largest Faculty at KPU, Arts offers an incredibly wide range of learning opportunities. The Arts create responsible, engaged, global citizens. Students of the Arts learn to think critically, write persuasively and expressively, understand the complexity of interconnected issues, and diffuse complex information into forms which can be understood by others. From Anthropology to Creative Writing, from Journalism to Philosophy, the Arts can be a launch-pad to a tremendous array of personal and professional possibilities.

Who Studies Arts?

Arts students are inherently curious about the world around them. They are passionate about societal issues and the progress of humanity. Arts students are creative thinkers, they wish to better understand complex problems and work towards innovative solutions. Arts students come from all walks of life and work towards all manner of goals. Whether they want to pursue a career in the professions, business, the non-profit or government sectors, or have a more creative vocation in mind, a study of the Arts can help students achieve their dreams.

ARTS 1100 3 credits

Experiencing the Arts

Students will be introduced to a broad range of liberal arts-related fields of study within the academic world. They will explore various disciplined-based and interdisciplinary approaches to a specific, current and compelling unifying theme, which will change periodically. Students will learn a number of key concepts and methods that shape and inform the perspectives developed in these fields, and how they articulate and inform one another. They will learn to view their world through multiple, and sometimes contrasting, perspectives and develop intellectual skills which are essential for learning in various disciplines and for continued learning in life beyond the University.

ARTS 3000 6 credits

Interdisciplinary Amazon Field School

Learners will engage in an intensive interdisciplinary field school in the Amazon rain forest. They will take part in cultural and creative immersion activities, participate in community engagement projects, and contextualize their field learning by classroom-based analysis and critical reflection before and after their field experiences. They will develop interdisciplinary skills in creativity, academic inquiry, ecology and conservation, cultural awareness, environmental design, design thinking, and community development. Learners will become familiar with various expressive modalities of the Amazon region (e.g. design, writing, music, movement, expressive arts, materiality, storytelling, etc.) and will explore the application of those modalities in an integrative learning environment. Note: Students will spend two weeks at the Field School site in addition to class sessions on campus before and after travel. Students must be nineteen years or older at the start of the course. Note: Students may earn credit for only one of DESN 3000 or ARTS 3000, as they are identical courses.

Level: UG

Prerequisite(s): 30 credits from courses at the 1100 level or higher, or permission of instructor.

Interdisciplinary Cuba Field School

The Cuba Field School is an experiential, interdisciplinary course that contributes to global citizenship and a broadened worldview. It engages learners from a wide cross-section of disciplines in an intensive exploration of Cuban music and culture through interactive workshops, site visits, and interactions with local students, educators, and artists. Within its exceptional and immersive learning environment students contribute interdisciplinary perspectives informed by their distinct backgrounds and programs of study. Collaborative participation, inspired investigation, and cultural immersion are distinctive features of the Cuba Field School's dynamic learning environment. Before their field experiences students will contextualize their learning through conventional lectures, group activities, and classroom-based discussion. Participatory research, immersive activities related to Cuba's expressive cultural traditions, research presentations, and regular critical reflection form the core of the field school itself. Personalized capstone projects featuring student-centred research and creation connect the entire course, and are the focus of students' work upon returning from Cuba. NOTE: Students will spend two weeks at the Field School site in addition to class sessions on campus before and after travel. Students must be nineteen years or older at the start of the course. Additional fees will apply to meet field trip expenses. br />

ARTS 3200 6 creditsInside-Out Prison Exchange

Students will explore various Arts topics using the Inside-Out Prison Exchange Program model. The Inside-Out model works with equal numbers of learners from both outside and inside the prison in a transformative, reflective and collaborative learning experience. Students will attend class primarily within local area corrections facilities with the exception of the first and last class for outside students, which will take place at KPU. The course content may arise from any Arts discipline and may include interdisciplinary approaches. Content may include, but is not restricted to, studies in Criminology, Creative Writing, Interdisciplinary Expressive Arts, Indigenous Studies, Policy Studies, Music, Fine Arts, Sociology, Psychology and other subject areas as determined by the qualified instructors. NOTE: Student acceptance into the course will be through an interview with course faculty prior to registration. Accepted students will be expected to provide a criminal record check, agree to a code of conduct, including dress code, and to adhere to prison visitor policies. An interview and a criminal record check are necessary in order for students to be accepted into this course. Students may take this course a maximum of two times for further credit on different topics
