Description
The Bachelor of Arts in Community Criminal Justice is currently under review. Intakes have been suspended pending completion of the review. Please check with an Arts Degree Advisor to discuss your academic plan.

The Bachelor of Arts in Community Criminal Justice program is designed to enable students to critically examine and explore the concepts and practices of justice, equality, and fairness that underpin our social and legal institutions. In so doing, students embark on community engagement and on an active and sustained engagement with institutions of civil society that can be productively harnessed to bring about social justice.

By combining theory and practice, students investigate issues of class, race, gender, and socio-economic conditions and examine how they shape our society. This program integrates opportunities to engage in undergraduate research, service learning, and practicum placements that provide students with highly transferable and marketable knowledge and skills.

The Bachelor of Arts in Community Criminal Justice program provides students with the following benefits:

• A broad understanding of crime and social justice issues within community, national, and international contexts.
• Courses unique in Canada that unite practical and professional skills with community building and social justice.
• An understanding of social and legal responses to crime and justice and the inter-relationship of these responses on societal attitudes.
• A solid understanding of, and familiarity with, the research techniques that allow us to accurately document crime, victimization, attitudes, and social and legal change.
• Ability to think critically and respond innovatively to emerging trends in community-based justice and related agencies.
• Opportunities to work in direct partnership with local agencies and faculty on projects or engage in research, working closely with academic supervisors.
• An understanding of, and ability to use, various means to promote social justice, including conflict resolution, restorative justice, community advocacy in a human rights framework, and an ability to deal with the many regulatory regimes that affect people in the justice system.

This unique program ensures that graduates have covered a range of theoretical, scientific, legal, and practical courses. Specific upper-division courses build knowledge and skills in:

• Understanding historical and contemporary perspectives of social justice and injustice
• Developing individual skills and leadership abilities to work effectively with community-based agencies and organizations that promote social justice goals
• Understanding crime in communities and its prevention
• Empirical data collection, analysis, and presentation
• Conflict resolution and mediation
• Restorative justice
• Professional communication skills
• Project planning, management, and evaluation
• Advocacy, human rights, and decision making in regulatory agencies
• Professional ethics

Students who are interested in applying to graduate school or prefer more extensive research experience are encouraged to undertake a structured program leading to an Honours degree. Students may obtain a Bachelor of Arts in Community Criminal Justice Honours degree by completing a further 12 credits of coursework centred on developing, researching, and writing an Honours Thesis.

Note: See the Bachelor of Arts Honours (https://calendar.kpu.ca/programs-az/arts/criminology/criminology-bah/), Major (https://calendar.kpu.ca/programs-az/arts/criminology/criminology-ba/), and Minor in Criminology (https://calendar.kpu.ca/programs-az/arts/criminology/criminology-minor/) for information on an alternate program.

Career Opportunities
The limited success of traditional responses to crime, violence, poverty, homelessness, mental illness, and other social issues has increased calls for different approaches and strategies. New awareness of the burdens and social costs associated with these issues requires communities to rethink and refocus their efforts. KPU’s Bachelor of Arts in Community Criminal Justice features a unique focus on community-based solutions to crime and social justice issues. Our innovative program prepares students for career opportunities in community-based work, social service delivery, legal advocacy, public safety, human rights, and the non-profit sector. The conceptual, critical, and applied skills that students acquire in this program will be attractive to employers in a wide range of settings, including community-based agencies and traditional organizations concerned with the justice field, such as law enforcement, courts, corrections, and customs and border security.
